Mo Award 2001, 2003 & 2004 (Australian Entertainment Industry), National Jazz Award (1998) winner and A.R.I.A Finalist 2001,2004 (Australian Recording Industry), Michelle Nicolle is a jazz musician whose chosen instrument is Voice.

Known for her ability to get right to the heart of a song, as well as being an in the moment improviser Michelle has continually developed and nurtured her art form with the help of her quartet. As well as releasing 7 CDs the MNQuartet has toured extensively throughout Australia and internationally - in 2015 to South Korea, Finland, and Czech Republic.

Arranger, band leader and award-winning jazz vocalist Michelle Nicolle started her musical career when she began the violin at the age of eight in the Barossa Valley, South Australia in the 1970s. Based in Melbourne, she is now celebrated as Australia's finest jazz singer.

As a country girl Michelle grew up listening to pop music and old movie tunes, playing in the Barossa Valley Schools Orchestra, and teaching herself to play the Angaston Town Hall's grand piano ~ whilst her father worked, polishing the dance floor. Throughout High School, music continued to dominate. She moved up the ranks of the Orchestra, kept 'nutting out' pop tunes on the piano (Prince & Duran Duran!!), blew 3rd cornet in a local marching band and sang in every choir on offer.

In 1985 Michelle was accepted into the Adelaide University - playing the violin. Surprisingly, Michelle says she didn't develop an interest in jazz until 1986 when she started singing with the university Adelaide Connection Jazz Choir. Hearing for the first time about Billie Holiday, Ella Fitzgerald and Chet Baker, Michelle soon immersed herself in their music- deciding that this was the music that her heart wanted to follow. In 1987 she swapped her major to "Jazz Voice".

She began transcribing the great horn players Miles Davis, Freddie Hubbard, Charlie Parker and Dizzy Gillespie - learning the language of improvisation through chord changes. When she completed her teaching degree, Michelle went on to study for her Associate Diploma of Jazz, where she "got into be-bop in a big way!" These two years, Michelle says, were the most important of her musical life as they laid the foundations for her wanting to make a career in playing jazz.

Several musical ventures, including the 5-piece vocal group Vo-Cool and her own quintet, followed. In 1995 Michelle moved to Melbourne to live.

At the 1998 Wangaratta International Jazz Festival Michelle won the prestigious National Jazz Award ~ the judges included the legendary be-bop singer Sheila Jordan (USA), current Blue Note star Kurt Elling (USA). In May, 2015 Kurt Elling asked Michelle to guest with him for his two concerts with the Melbourne Symphony Orchestra.

"I have loved Michelle Nicolle's singing perpetually and without ceasing since first I heard her. Michelle is a singer born to sing, born to charm, enlighten and seduce through music. I only wish she lived in the States somewhere so I could manage to hear her more often."

Kurt Elling, April 2012

Leading her band with a quiet dignity, Nicolle's apparent ease at clever, difficult, and varied improvisation, bring to mind the skills of singers like Betty Carter, Mel Torme or Ella Fitzgerald. But this exceptionally talented woman sounds like none of those singers. What she does hold in common is being true to her artistic self, having an incredible 'ear' as well as being a serious jazz musician and lyricist. Her clear tone and impressive breath control indicate hard work and dedication to her art form.

Concert Reviews:

"..but it was Michelle Nicolle who stood out, combining emotional honesty with an improviser's instinct..." review of Melbourne International Festival Opening Concert, May 2013. The Age

" an Australian jazz singer ready to command a world stage...all the band had to do was set up a golden glow of warmth, soft groove and space and Nicole was soaring to places you will be taken by few singers. In the world, I mean." Sydney Morning Herald, Feb. 2016

"Throughout the Michelle Nicolle Quartet's engaging performance they played with a laid-back rhythm with a focus on improvisation, and embraced the challenge of this approach unencumbered by past styles and more interested in focusing on the essence and uniqueness of the material at the moment.." Bangkok Post

"Thoroughly entertaining...the vocal pyrotechnics were breathtaking, yet they arrived only because the shape of the music demanded climatic exuberance."

Evening Post, New Zealand, Oct, 2001 Wellington International Jazz Fest.
